

Supernatural Love

by Meredith Cravens

Longing and Wanting
Were enemies of mine
Feeding off society's
Distorted love lines.

To feel Your touch
Is it asking too much?
My Husband and Lover
I need You to cover
These earthly eyes
With wisdom on high.

I inquired in ignorance
Accused You in anger
Mercifully You moved me
In Your lap will I linger.

Truth shatters all ties
To worldly lies
Seeking, you'll find
Heaven's sweet rhyme
Singing the story
That sweeps you to glory.

Physical love falls shy
Skin deep, it won't satisfy

You lavish living water
Its depth, indefinable
You pour out compassion
Its extent, inexplicable
You're ready as my refuge
My Rock for rest secure
You're speaking tender secrets
Passions find eternal cure.

The test of time?
Before it existed, You called me Your bride
The question of commitment?
You paid the ultimate price—Your very life.

Now I see
You said, "Come to Me"
Not physically tangible
But certainly touchable
Lacking no good thing
You fill my being
Nothing is above
Your supernatural love.
